Year of Our Lord 3,000.

An interesting book has been published at Milan, Italy, by Paolo Montegazza, says the Two Kepublics. "The year of our Lord 3,000," is the title and its imaginings are more advanced and weird than were often those of Bellamy's "Looking Backward" which caused some talk several years ago. The story is of the adventures of au engaged couple, who with the freedom imagined to prevail at that day, take a trip around the world together before their marriage. Of course they go in an air ship. Their very hist sup made is near Spezia where was fougut the last naval battle of the world simultancously with the last land battle near Paris, about 2,000, A. D., in which engagements some 3,000,000 lives were lost. This so horrined the civilized world that universal piece was proclaimed and all armies were disbanded. The United States of Europe resulted, and territorial boundaries, tariffs and different languages were wiped

The desert of Sahara had been converted into an inland sea and to prevent a too great change in climate a supply of icebergs around the north pole have been meited. A general electric station has been established at Maits which supplies the world with light and power.
